

Hello

I hope that you are keeping well and staying safe. It seems like such a long time since we saw you in school, but please do know that we are thinking of you all and that you are still very much part of the St. Annes family.

Before half term you received the home learning activities for this week, and also details of the Oldham Theatre story workshop. We've attached some further resources to use with the recorded content of the website. All links are in the attachments. There are some great practical games to support language and literacy so please select at least one of these to complete at home.

Your story for this week is Jon Burgerman's 'Everybody Worries'.

Oldham Learning Disability Team has produced a lovely video of their members using Signalong to sign 'Three Little Birds'. It ties in really nicely with the book and would be a great song to learn some signs together. We were beginning to use some Signalong in class so your child may already know a few of the signs. Copy the link below to view it.

The theme for this week's Worship is Patience. The attached leaflet includes prayers and creative activities to support this at home.

Thank you to everyone who has emailed with some examples of your home learning. It is really important that you continue to engage with this and that you set aside some time each day to work on some of the activities. I'm aware that it is a difficult time for many, and there are lots of constraints on time and energy. However; just an hour or so a day really makes such a difference and will support your child to continue on their learning journey until we can all be safely back together again. If you have not been emailing some home learning or accessing purplemash previously you need to ensure that this is now happening at least weekly.

We have placed more 2do activities on purple mash, and regularly check this and 'Teach Your Monster To Read' to see how the children are engaging in home learning.

*Please do contact us if you need any support in the home learning activities. And remember to email some of your home learning activities from the weekly email sent.*

Take care

Mrs Ratchford and Mrs Evans
